TIDEWATER CHAISE BY BUNNY WILLIAMS ▲
An all-weather resin chaise woven in two chocolaty shades of truffle, Tidewater hugs like a cozy chair with vintage references but sturdy, modern comfort—and especially fetching pink cushions. $3,750, Century Furniture, Merchandise Mart, Suite 1464, 312.787.9488, centuryfurniture.com

LINEAR OUTDOOR FIRE BY ROBATA ►
Light up your summer nights with the hottest indoor look brought outside—this linear fire pit in industrial-chic corten steel with an earthy, weathered look comes with a cover to convert it to a modern coffee table. From $5,400, paloform.com

MUSE OUTDOOR LAMP BY CONTARDI ◀
Shine brightly on the deck or at the beach with the hexagonal light by Tristan Auer; the portable battery-powered lamp with plaited black leather handle comes in black or white pearl. From $986, Lightology, 215 W. Superior St., 312.944.1000, lightology.com

WEST LOOP SUMMIT

When urban landscape architect Stephen Prassas (prassaslandscapestudio.com) was asked to design the roof terrace of this “ultimate bachelor pad” in the West Loop, he wasted no time or precious man-space. The home’s interior mimics the lifestyle of a high roller, but the client asked for the deck to be simple and clean. With the help of Wolbrink Architects, he transformed the 1,250-square-foot space from an uninspired natural wood aesthetic to a modern oasis, complete with a stainless steel mini kitchen and a spa enclosed by composite decking.

The east and west ends are blocked by corrugated aluminum privacy panels, while white and blue translucent resin fencing shields the north. The backlighting of the blue fence radiates a Vegas ambience when the sun sets, while metal mesh screens allow flowering clematis vines to grow up the white sections for a lush touch of green. Prassas kept the landscape minimal, with basic box hedges, a berry tree and durable ground cover—ultimately crafting the perfect outdoor living space for his client’s elevated taste.
